

Managing People in Projects

Improve the performance of your most critical project resource - People

Audience: Managing People in Projects is essential for both novice and experienced project managers and is relevant to anyone working in a project environment or have direct report responsibilities.

Duration: 2 Days

Credits: 14 PDU's

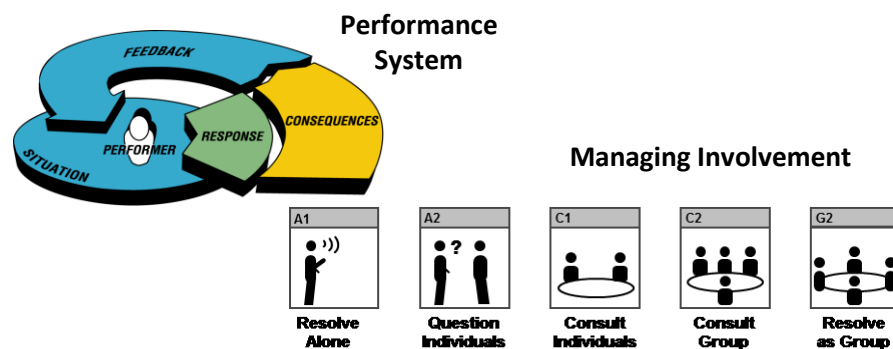

Course Description

Managing People in Projects combines the power of KT Project Management with our approaches to managing human performance. This hands-on workshop is valuable for anyone working in a project environment including individuals and project teams. It focuses on how best to manage the performance of people involved in your projects. Project work demands more than a traditional manager-worker relationship. The workshop provides a set of skills for creating the conditions for successful performance and for motivating and guiding the actions of everyone involved in the project.

Skills Developed

Managing People in Projects helps you understand the inter-relationships among the project setting, participants, behaviours and consequences, and use this knowledge to improve project performance.

- Learn whom to involve, when and how to involve them
- Learn how to set expectations, track and analyse performance, and provide feedback to people involved in your projects
- Create a high performance climate on your projects and build teams committed to your project's success

Results Delivered

- At Port of Seattle (Aviation Division), KT processes allowed teams to shoulder a massive collection of airport expansion projects and move from confusion to clarity
- KT processes allowed team members at a leading luxury watch manufacturer to balance project tasks with their regular work while eliminating 6 weeks from the project execution of an annual centrepiece sales event
