

MANAGING PEOPLE IN PROJECTS

Improve the performance of your most critical project resource - People

BENEFITS

Complete projects on schedule, within budget, and with the desired results by

- Motivating people to want to work on your projects
- Getting people to perform on your projects, even if they don't report to you
- Applying a powerful approach to managing the people on your projects
- Knowing whom to involve in your projects and when and how to involve them

Participants will receive Kepner-Tregoe's book, The Rational Project Manager

WORKSHOP DESCRIPTION

Managing People in Projects combines the power of KT Project Management with our approaches to managing human performance. This hands-on workshop is valuable for anyone working in a project environment including individuals and project teams. It focuses on how best to manage the performance of people involved in your projects. But don't assume that managing people effectively means engaging in the traditional manager-worker relationship. A rational approach to creating the conditions that allow for successful performance is required.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

Managing People in Projects is appropriate for both novice and experienced project managers and is relevant to anyone working in a project environment.

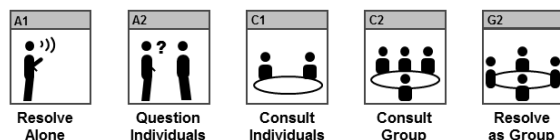

WHAT YOU WILL LEARN

Managing People in Projects helps you understand the inter-relationships among the project setting, participants, behaviours and consequences, and use this knowledge to improve project performance. You learn whom to involve, when and how to involve them, how to set expectations, track and analyse performance, and provide feedback to people involved in your projects.

By integrating Kepner-Tregoe's Performance System and Managing Involvement approaches within the framework of a systematic project management process, you will be able to create a high performance climate on your projects and build teams committed to your project's success.
